Guruji was at that time working at Kazipet.

Kumar choked. He could not eat. He could not tell his wife what had transpired but did tell her that once again he had got into a heated argument with the MD.

At night he started sensing chest pain. He knew he was heading for a heart attack. He called up Guruji's residence but was told Guruji was at Kazipet.

Kumar was admitted to hospital. As the news spread a message was relayed to the local office of Best & Crompton, and this message was conveyed to Subhakaran, one of Guruji's lieutenants. Subhakaran was travelling with Guruji on official work (Subhakaran was working as a deputy under Guruji). Immediately he informed Guruji.

Subhakaran was an ardent devotee of Guruji and knew about the powers of Guruji. In fact in another classic miracle where the station master's daughter had been kidnapped at Vadodara station (then called Baroda), it was Subhakaran who was present on the scene when the kidnapping took place and had dashed into the station master's room to intimate the station master and had then told the station master about Guruji's powers. The station master fell at Guruji's feet and the girl came back unharmed. (This incident has already been carried much earlier).

Guruji prayed. He knew instantly what had happened. Suddenly Guruji started getting chest pain. He had taken on Kumar's heart attack. He immediately alerted the persons who were with Him about the chest pain and told them to take Him to hospital. Later on He was shifted to Guntur hospital.

Kumar's heart problem disappeared. But he was kept under observation and discharged after all parameters showed normal. The heart attack Guruji had was a massive one and took Him a few months to get back to normalcy.

After this Guruji was very careful not to take risks physically. When travelling with DMS members on pilgrimages, we were aware that He would avoid lifting weights such as suitcases. He would avoid taking rooms where He would have to climb up the stairs.

Guruji's taking on the ailments of devotees was truly extraordinary. The frequency made it look like a daily routine. Even at times He would take on multiple devotee afflictions. This aspect of His love for devotees was common knowledge to those who were close to Him. The most common of afflictions – from what we can recollect and put a frequency distribution – were 'labour pains' of lady devotees in the final stages of delivery. Needless to say, these are happily the content for many future issues of Satsanga (in the past we have covered a few instances).

It is not possible to fathom the love He had and showed. Not for anything – He never wanted anything in return, not even gratitude and some devotees behaved just that way. Not once did Guruji react negatively. It is only close devotees who used to get furious with Him for continuing showing affection to such thankless devotees. Only one thing probably mattered to Guruji – was there any way He could do more for His devotees! Quite simply – Guruji was the definition of True Love!
